INTRODUCTION.

THE Collection of ITALIAN AES GRAVE and ROMAN COINS, of which the following is the Catalogue, was formed by the late Sir Edward Bunbury during a period extending over more than half a century. Though Sir Edward Bunbury has left but few references as to the sources from which he procured many of his coins, yet from the numerous purchases which he made at the Pembroke, Devonshire and Northwick sales, not a few can be traced to those collections, and also to others of importance of later dates.

This Collection may be divided into three distinct series, viz.: the ITALIAN AES GRAVE, the ROMAN REPUBLICAN or FAMILY SERIES, and the IMPERIAL SERIES. Throughout the whole collection it is apparent that, whilst endeavouring to secure pieces of the highest rarity and importance, special attention was paid to the condition of the coins. In consequence, the state of preservation of the majority of the coins in the various series leaves nothing to be desired. Many specimens are as fresh as when they left the dies, and show that they could scarcely have been in circulation, and if so, for only a very limited period.

In the description of the Aes Grave of Italy, references have been given to the official Catalogue of the British Museum, Coins of Italy. From these references it will be seen that the collection now offered for sale compares very favourably in number with that in our National Institution. Again, in the Roman Republican or Family Coins, the numerous and consecutive references to Babelon's Monnaies de la Republique Romaine show how complete the collection is in this section, especially in the denarii class; in fact, there are but few pieces of importance described in that work, which are not to be found in this collection. In dealing with so large a series as that of Imperial times, Sir Edward Bunbury contented himself with a few representative pieces in gold, silver, and copper of each reign, selecting these also with care as to their condition.

As it is not possible within a limited space to enumerate the remarkable pieces which abound in this collection, we must refer those who are interested in the subject to the coins themselves, which we feel sure will warrant the opinion we have ventured to express.
